King of the Lions: Hear Him Roar

By Samantha Corcoran
Contributing Writer

"I love Saint Leo," said Masterson Dempsey, graduating senior and 2016 commencement speaker.

Dempsey was born in Cleveland, Ohio and currently lives in Wesley Chapel. He had played football, ran track and performed in school musicals throughout his high school years.

Q: How was high school for you? Did you enjoy it?

"I loved high school and I discovered a lot of my musical talents and passions in high school. I even graduated as my class poet laureate and got to rap at graduation for about two thousand people."

Q: Why did you choose to come to Saint Leo University?

"There are too many reasons to list of why I picked Saint Leo but mainly the tight knit classroom size, the positive environment, and beautiful campus scenery.Also, being myself raised Catholic and it being a Catholic University was also another helpful factor in my selection of Saint Leo. When I got selected to lead scholars and the honors program I was confident that Saint Leo would be the best home for me collegiately."

Q: Over your four years here at Saint Leo how do you feel your experience has helped you?

"I have loved my experience over the past four years here. I have grown as a leader. I have become better than I would have hoped for. I have met the best teachers and had fantastic classroom experiences and going on conferences has been amazing with different teachers, as well. I have been to New York twice, to San Diego once, to Washington D.C. once, and also to Orlando, and that was with the Leadership Club that I helped create on this campus, and then with ITC I grew as a leader, International Tourism Club, where we put on events and what I am going to do with my career is events, entertainment, hospitality."

Q: How many clubs/events have you been involved with on campus?

"I have been involved in two clubs, President of both of them. I just passed them on, both of them, to the new president. A new girl in charge of leadership and a new girl in charge of hospitality and tourism ITC. I have had a really good chance to run meetings with that and have a team, building a team that has a goal."

"I've seen him grow up over the past four years. He came in nervous and young, and now that he's graduating he's got so much more confidence," said Peter Marian, Affiliate Faculty of Admissions for the School of Business.

Q: What would you claim to be your greatest accomplishments on the Saint Leo campus?

"The greatest accomplishment is networking around here, because if I hadn't done all that I wouldn't have been supported enough by the community to be voted King of Saint Leo and be voted commencement speaker. So, keeping good karma, and positivity, and meeting a lot of awesome people, and never burning any bridges."

Q: Considering the core values of Saint Leo do you feel like you've really grown here? How do you get everyone to remember you?

"The biggest one in my speech, I touch on all of the core values, and the speech has already been submitted and I am very excited to deliver it once they approve the words. The most important one in my opinion is personal development because when you're here you develop yourself and if you do that authentically people can tell and if you're an authentic version of you it inspires other people and it keeps you happy because you're not being fake to anyone. I think that the truth shines through."

Q: Who inspires you most? Both in the real world and in the Saint Leo community?

"My biggest inspiration in life is Pharrell Williams because he is very happy, positive, talented, and a really successful person. Pharrell Williams, the artist and producer, he is on the voice as well. On this campus, I'll list the main teachers that have influenced me the most; Dr. Duncan, Dr.Ashley Castle, Dr. Judy Holcomb was my advisor and carried me through the whole process, and Peter Marian, and, as well as, John Heather because I spent a lot of time with them and grew as a man with them."

Q: What do you plan to do immediately after graduation?

"I am going to take a nice mental break, for about a month or so. Personally, I am going to finally handle a surgery I have needed, for my breathing and my nose, because once school is over I finally have time to address an urgent medical need that, while I was in school, I had to just put on the back burner. Then, as well as that, I am going to address my passion for making music and I am going to start making music and getting positive messages out. I am going to continue working at Saddlebrook Resort, where I have been for the past five years, and I am just going to grow there and take everything one day at a time. But, the first thing I need is a break to recharge and process all the things that have happened in the past four years, that I have loved, but have really tired me out."

Q: Do you have any advice for the freshman coming in the fall semester?

"My biggest advice to people who are coming here – and I love the opportunity that I have met a lot of freshman and I have given them advice – is to never do anything alone and always take an opportunity to walk into the lunchroom or anywhere and just meet people, because you never know who you're going to meet. The people I met and became best friends with here I met in the [cafeteria] just by talking or at an event with the same interest in music – and those are friends that I'll probably have forever but if I had not gone out of my way and met them, then I would have never had that friend. So, to network is the main thing."

Q: If you could go back to your freshman year to tell yourself one thing to do differently, one thing you would change, what would it be?

"If I could have gone back four years ago, there is not much I would change because I love how everything played out. I would have just attended more of the Saint Leo events so that I could have even more memories. With that being said, I went to a lot of them and I was very busy,I just always wished I could have gone to more events and enjoyed all these opportunities that Saint Leo gives you through Campus Activities Board."

Dempsey's classmates, peers, and professors had nothing but wonderful things to say about him. Consensus says that Dempsey is a unique, eccentric, prioritized, and all-around stand-up guy. People believe that his commencement speech will be remembered for many years to come and that he will not be forgotten.

"I'm wishing him well, and to not be a stranger. This is his home away from home. You all are part of the family. This is your alum, this is your home away from home even when you graduate and move on," said Peter Marian, a professor at Saint Leo, when asked to comment on Dempsey.

Dempsey will be speaking at commencement on Apr. 30. The graduation ceremony for graduate students begins at 9 a.m. while the undergraduate ceremony begins at 2:30 p.m. at the Marion Bowman Activity Center.

Is There a Right Way to Study?

By Michayne Stoney
Contributing Writer

College may be considered one of the most exciting periods in one's life. It may however become burdensome with assignments, presentations and finals. Taking quizzes, tests, and final examinations is undoubtedly stressful. The concept of studying may seem difficult, perplexing, and demotivating. Many students still don't know their most efficient means of study, and with so many study techniques within any one student population, many may wonder: Is there a "right" way to study? Undoubtedly, some study habits definitely help in increasing learning and memory. Others however are simply just a waste of time. Certainly, learning how to study is paramount in achieving the best academic results.

Thought the "right" way to study may differ for each person, finding an effective means of studying really begins before the actual process of studying. It is important to manage your time. It helps a great deal to have a physical organizer, where you can make a weekly schedule. This will allow you to plan efficiently for study periods, and help you to properly allocate how each hour of your day is being spent. This will not only help in improving your grades on final examinations, but will increase your confidence level to begin studying. Having a definite plan in place before actually starting the process will allow you to have a different approach and perspective where studying is concerned. It is also important to make sure that you stick to your schedule as much as possible. Your study plan should always be based on priority, realistic, and not impossible. When planning, you should always consider everything else that needs to be done throughout the day.

Undoubtedly, there needs to be a balance between social and academic life, so there is not a burn-out during study sessions. The goal is to be prepared, refreshed, and ready to take on the material with optimum confidence. You should always remember that education is the most important thing, and prioritize with that at the forefront of your mind. If you think you do not have enough time to study, you may want to reevaluate how you are allocating hours throughout the day.

Each person is different, and we all don't study and learn the same. However, it is important for students to plan and prepare themselves for the material on hand. Certainly, students must pace themselves for each study session, bearing in mind their strengths and weaknesses in each area. Simply put, if you know you take a longer time to grasp concepts, ensure you have enough time to go through material and be comfortable.

Being well-rested before studying is another excellent way of preparing for an effective, and efficient study session. Getting at least 6-8 hours each night, will definitely maximize overall studying, learning, and memorizing potentials. A power-nap also helps if you are sleep derived. Scientists advise that after this nap, you perform some sort of physical activity right before you begin to study.

According to research, the most effective technique of studying and retaining knowledge involves studying way ahead of an exam, and practicing questions from past examinations, or your own practice quizzes. Contrary to popular belief, waiting last minute and cramming loads of information the night before an exam is the least effective way of retaining any information. Whether its history dates, chemical formulas, mathematical equations, or Spanish vocabulary, adequate practice, starting weeks before the exam is significant in helping students to remember the material for an exam.

Though memorizing content has a lot to do with overall performance on an exam, confidence levels, anxiety, and nervousness also play a significant role. Grades scored on final exams have a lot to do with the frame of mind a student has before going into an exam. According to The Wall Street Journal in a 2011 report, 35 percent of students were so nervous before writing exams or tests that it negatively affected their overall performance. As such, while studying it is important to practice different relaxation techniques, and pace yourself so as to grow in comfort and confidence with the material. Doing this while studying will help in creating the relaxed state of mind needed to focus and remain calm during exams.

Snacking healthily during periods of study may also significantly improve memory. Research notes that colorful berries such as blueberries, cherries, black currants, raspberries, cranberries, blackberries, gooseberries, and even grapes have significant health effects directly related to brain function. These tasty, healthy snacks have the power to reduce the level of toxins in the bloodstream, and they also contain phytonutrients and antioxidants. These chemicals improve blood flow to the brain and enhance neural activity as well. Similarly, dark chocolate can do many wonders to the human brain. Dark chocolate not only improves memory skills, but it also increases blood flow to the brain, therefore increasing alertness and clarity.The darker the chocolate, the more benefits your brain will receive.

A few techniques researchers recommend include: summarizing, self-explanation, highlighting/underlining, making images, rereading, and making tests. Based on research, these are the most effective in memorizing content for an exam. These were also named some of the most popular studying habits, and this list may help any college student to tackle arduous subjects, allowing them to feel confident about upcoming tests or exams.

One of the most challenging games series has just released its thrid installment. "Dark Souls III" is somewhat easier for people who played the previous games, but newcomers to the series will have a hard time adjusting to the non-exsistent learning curve.

Saint Leo City Limits

By Danielle Meikle
Contributing Writer

The School of Arts and Science hosted "Saint Leo City Limits" on Apr. 12 in the new Black Box Theatre. This concert showcased standard tunes and vocal jazz performed by students, staff, and faculty. The night featured thirteen acts from Just the Facts and the Saint Leo Chamber Singers, both of which were directed by Cynthia Selph, an instructor of music, as well as the Jazz Ensemble and their director Mauricio Rodriguez.

The Jazz Ensemble, a student group, opened the night with a rendition of the upbeat Latin song "Oye Como Va" by Tito Puente. This performance set the stage for an evening of wonderful music. The Jazz Ensemble also performed right after- this time accompanied by the Chamber Singers, another student group. They sang, "Sing, Sing, Sing" by Louis Prima, a piece from the "Swing" era of music. On their own, the Chamber Singers sang "Eleanor Rigby" by Lennon and McCarteney.

Just the Facts, a faculty and staff chorus, entertained the audience with three pieces. First, a crowd favorite by Duke Ellington, "It Don't Mean a Thing," and later a more soulful piece, "The Way You Look Tonight" by Jerome Kern. They also closed the show, along with Adam Shoemaker, associate professor of business, and his wife Amy Shoemaker, singing "I'm Beginning to See the Light" by Duke Ellington.

The other seven performances were soloists that were just as good as the groups. The Shoemaker's were the first of the soloists, performing a passionate song called "La Vie en Rose" by David, Piaf, and LouiGuy. Next, Rosemary Luyex, a student, performed "My Funny Valentine" by Rodgers and Hart.

These soulful jazz pieces continued throughout the evening with William Mondy, adjunct professor of biology, singing "Someone to Watch over Me" by I. and G. Gershwin, Joey Gilbert singing "Fly me to the Moon" by Bart Howard, and Jennifer MacDonald, a student, singing "Trust in Me" by Ager, Schwatrz, and Wever. Lastly, another student, Marquise McGill, changed the tempo a bit with his rendition of "I Got a Woman" by Ray Charles.

The band that accompanied the singers were skillful musicians and did an excellent job at recreating the instrumentals of the songs. The band included Inna Korotkevitch, the staff accompanist, on the piano, Mauricio Rodriguez on bass, the guest artist, Carl Roa on guitar, and Debra Sailer,a student, on percussion.

Adam Shoemaker (left) and Amy Shoemaker (right) were two of the many performers who serenaded the audience with covers of famous songs.

There was a superb turnout of family, students, and other faculty for the event. Members of the audience were captivated by the displays of vocal and musical talent as they constantly rewarded the performers with applause.

Rebecca Hugh, a freshman marketing major, expresses her satisfaction with the concert by saying, "The performances were superb. I think they were able to really capture my attention and make me feel the music."

When asked if she had a favorite, she responded, "I enjoyed all the performances, but I really liked 'It Don't Mean a Thing' by the Jazz Ensemble."

This showcase of Saint Leo's talent was a great event. The hard work and dedication the students and faculty participating in the ensembles put in was evident in their almost flawless execution of every note, string, and chord.

American Sign Language Arrives At Saint Leo

By Randawnique Coakley
Contributing Writer

Saint Leo University has a new club that arrived on campus this spring, the SLU Signers. This club is focused on members learning about American Sign Language and the deaf culture. The club, which meets every Thursday at 6 pm, was founded and is headed by Rachael Stewart, a freshman majoring in elementary education.

Inspired by her sign language teacher, Kim Huston, Stewart wanted to bring this language to Saint Leo.

"Every day in class we would learn something new, [whether] it be a sign, or something so incredible about the deaf culture," Stewart said. "I wanted to bring that amazing language here at Saint Leo."

American Sign Language is a language that allows those that are deaf and hard of hearing to communicate with each other. However, this language also breaks down barriers between the deaf, hard of hearing, and hearing. This club allows this beautiful language to spread to the students and faculty of Saint Leo. Stewart teaches American Sign Language to the members, bridging the gap between the hearing and the deaf for the Saint Leo community.

The SLU Signers have rather informal meetings. On the first meeting, Stewart taught the alphabet and each club member how to sign their names. Every club meeting starts with the members going over signing the alphabet and their names. Also, at each meeting, Stewart reviews the the words the members learned the weeks prior, and she teaches additional words, while speaking about deaf culture. Even though the meetings are once a week, Stewart creates fun activities for the members to remember the signs.

"The benefits of joining this club is learning this language," Stewart said. "In life, you have no idea who you are going to run into. Several times at my job that I work at, Zaxbys, I had to encounter deaf people coming in and trying to order food, and the second you start to sign to them their face lights up because they know that you have taken the time to learn their language."

The club is running smoothly, currently educating Saint Leo students; however, Stewart had to overcome a lot of dostacles to establish this club on campus. In fact, she not only had to go through the proper channels on campus but she also had to balance her busy life to take on this massive responsibility of leading the club.

"The [main dostacle] I faced with creating this club was time. I have always been a busy person, I have always wanted to be involved with school and keep a social life. But trying to juggle everything with my jobs, classes, friends/family, and just joining Alpha Sigma Tau, it was hard for me to find time to fit this club in, but all I have to do is keep managing my time and keeping my priorities in line and everything will keep falling into place."

Stewart described about balancing her busy life, "I had to make sure I had all of the material together on what I wanted to teach. I had to get things together to make sure that I kept the members interested and wanting to come back."

"I had to create a constitution for the club, get 125 signatures around campus, [and] create an Eboard." Stewart said about what she had to do to establish this on-campus club.

The Eboard consists of Stewart as President, Tyler Davis –a freshman majoring in business management- as Vice-president, and Jennifer Conell – a freshman majoring in criminal justice- as historian. Stewart also obtained Patti Dempsey, a health and wellness nurse, as the faculty advisor for the club. Stewart asked Dempsey personally to be the advisor.

"She was the first person I was talking to it about and she said that she always wanted to learn ASL," Stewart said. "So, I thought that because she is so sweet and amazing she would be the perfect fit."

This club recently started this semester, in Jan., and not many Saint Leo students and staff members are aware that the club exists. She publicized the club through Facebook, word of mouth, and a table at the Involvement Fair. This clubs allows the Saint Leo community to connect with the deaf culture; however, the club can be even more influential, if even more students are aware of the club's existence.

"I didn't know this club even existed on campus," Michelle Lightbourne, a freshman majoring in healthcare management and interested in joining the club, said. "I always wanted to learn sign language, and I was always interested in it. But in my hometown, it is hard to find a teacher for sign language. I am so elated to find out about this club."

Lions are Kings and Queens of the Court

By Matthew Vandenburgh
Sports Editor

The Saint Leo University men's and women's Tennis teams have been quietly dominating the NCAA Division 2 world. With both teams sitting at 18-1 as of April 18, the teams are poised for a run at the national championships.

The men's team is ranked number two in the nation as of the latest ITA Division 2 Men's College Tennis poll, from March 23. They have two contests left until the Sunshine State Conference Championships, an April 19 game against number six Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University and hosting Palm Beach Atlantic University on April 23. Having already clinched the Sunshine State Conference regular season championship, the team is laser focused on winning more than that.

"We all know what the final goal is," Senior Alex Theiler told saintleolions.com. "We are happy while we do well along each step, but we know that a season is not about how you start, it's about how you finish. All these extra motivations are good to keep us going in the right direction and hopefully at the end of the season we can celebrate something really big. But for now, I would like to say point by point."

It has been an impressive season for the Lions for another reason as well, as two of the last three national champions have been from the Sunshine State Conference.

"We have some of the top teams in the country in our conference," Head Coach Chris Frusci said to saintleolions.com. "We are getting good competition day in and out, so I believe we are at an advantage in that sense. We know how to handle pressure and we know how to compete against good tennis. We also know that what we've done up until now is just step one towards the ultimate goal. Pretty soon 'it's win or go home' time which is an equalizer for everyone."

The women have been equally as impressive. Sitting at number three in the country from the ITA Division 2 Men's College Tennis poll, from March 23, the Lady Lions clinched their first Sunshine State Conference regular season championship in school history. Frusci, who coaches both the men and the women, feels that this is going to be a big boost to the team.

"I think this is a great accomplishment for our programs, given that it was the first time ever," Head Coach Frusci told saintleolions.com. "It obviously gives us confidence that if we can make it out of the strongest conference in the country, then we have the potential to do great things. We will have to see some of these teams two more times just to qualify for nationals, but obviously we have displayed what we're capable of."

The women's team has the same remaining schedule as the men's team, but the Embry-Riddle women's team is not ranked in the top 25.

While both teams are succeeding on the team level, individuals for both sides are earning accolades as well. Freshman Alberto Barrosso-Campos is the third ranked singles player in the country, and Senior Egor Panyushkin joins him in the top 15 in the men's singles rankings. Freshman Natalia Siedliska is ranked second overall for women's singles, joined by fellow Freshman Isabella Robbiani who ranked 16 overall. In doubles contests, Senior Alex Thieler joins Barrosso-Campos to form the number two ranked men's pairing in the nation, while Siedliska and Junior Anastasia Wagner form the ninth ranked women's pair.

With the highly talented freshmen paired up with the experienced upperclassmen, the postseason should be highly prosperous for both the men and women this summer.

School's Not Out For Them

By Matthew Vandenburgh
Sports Editor

Even though the final exams finish on April 26, some Saint Leo Lions will be active even after that. Sports teams will be competing on campus during the summer break, some playing into June depending on how well they do.

The Lion's baseball team finishes their regular season competing at Florida Southern College on May 14, and if they make it into the playoffs, their season can potentially end on June 4 with a national championship. That is assuming a lot though, considering the baseball team currently is not ranked nationally and sitting in fifth place in the Sunshine State Conference with a record of 24-16. They will likely need to win most of their nine remaining games to make the playoffs.

The softball team remains strong, despite being swept by Palm Beach Atlantic on April 15 and 16, the team holds a 37-4 overall record and is ranked fourth in the country as of April 18. Their regular season ends with three games at Rollins College on April 22 and 23. They should easily qualify for the regional tournament, the first stage of the playoffs, and are talented enough that they can make it to the national championship tournament. If they make it through to there, their season can end as late as May 21, almost a full month after other students head home for their summer relaxation.

Both men's and women's tennis will play on after finals, competing in the Sunshine State Conference Championships from April 28 through April 30. Both teams have been dominant this year, each going 18-1 as of April 18. Should this run of excellence continue, they might play through until May 21, competing for the National Championship in Denver, Colo. As the men are the number two team in the country and the women are number three as of the latest ITA Division Two College Tennis rankings from March 23, it is highly likely they will make a strong postseason run.

Men's and women's lacrosse will end their regular seasons on April 23, but the men's team may still have more games for them. They are currently 8-4, with a 1-3 in-conference record. This is good enough for fourth place right now in the Sunshine State Conference, and if they maintain that position in the standings, they will play on April 29 in the conference tournament.

The women's team has had a rough season, going 3-10 overall and winless in the conference. While it is unlikely the team will play further this season after their April 23 regular season finale, next season will bring renewed hope and renewed purpose.
Finally the men's and women's track teams will be racing as late as May 12. Finishing up their second official season, the track team has had outstanding performances by cross country stars Colette Rampf and Valentin Lenz, as well as first place finishes throughout the season. Some of the runners may qualify for the national championships, meaning the Lions will be prowling the track until May 28.

This summer may be relaxing for the non-student athletes, but many of our sports stars will stay busy this break, so keep your eyes open for all the summer details.
